

FOOTDOWN

Porsche Centre Hong Kong shows how a Cayenne S can look sporty with a five-metre kayak on its roof at the finish of the dealers' third Outward Bound Adventure Race in Sai Kung on Sunday. We congratulate the dealer in backing the 20km kayaking, swimming and trail-running charity event for 85 four-man teams, won by Team Sunnto PowerBar (below). More motor traders should back local sport. As a result of the centre's support, at least 380 people will identify Porsche's name and its attributes with their hobby.

But the density of Hong Kong's pollution reminds Foot Down to judge each car on its CO<sub>2</sub> emissions from now on. The kayak-carrying Cayenne S pace car is a top ride, with a top speed of 242km/h, but it emits 380g of CO<sub>2</sub> per km. So, we'd rather run and bike behind a Smart Fortwo (top speed 134km/h), which has paced marathons at a mere 90g/km. Wouldn't you?